

Do photovoltaic panels have false power ratings

Overview

A false power rating refers to exaggerated or misleading claims about a solar panel's energy generation capacity. For example, a panel advertised as 400W might only deliver 320W in real-world.

Solar panels receive their ratings under specific testing conditions known as "Standard Testing Conditions" or "STCs". These conditions serve as

Understanding Solar System Ratings

Every solar panel has a published power rating. This is its rated power under Standard Test Conditions (STC). If you add up the rated power for all of the panels, then you get the peak rating of a solar

A false power rating refers to exaggerated or misleading claims about a solar panel's energy generation capacity. This issue often stems from testing under unrealistic conditions or deliberate mislabeling.

"Do you not" vs. "Don't you"

In "standard" spoken English, "Don't you" is more common, and "do you not" sounds very formal. But in some UK dialects "do you not" is the more common form (and not considered formal).
