Had Judy been more careful she could have got much better

Here's a multiple choice question concerning the subjunctive mood: Had Judy been more careful on the maths exam, she ___ much better results now. A you'd better/you'd best/you best do that

In my part of the US, "You'd better" is common, colloquial AE. "You'd best" is antiquated AE. Once common, it is rarely heard now. "You best" is grammatically incorrect AND antiquated. I'm

A better word for Half ass

Is there another word for a person who doesn't finish most of the things he starts? I am looking for a synonym for Half @s*

The Better Angels

If there are better angels, what are the opposite? Worse angels? The use of "better" is confusing to me. There are good angels who, traditionally (be it mythology or religion), obey God's

You had better not be late

In the US we often drop the verb when speaking: "You better not be late." But B is the correct option of the three provided.

Better words to substitute for "things"? , WordReference Forums

Hello everyone, "There are three things I did well". Are there any words that can substitute the word "things". It doesn't sound formal enough to be used in an essay. Please help.

Have a better one.

Have a better one! When Deckard is approached in a deserted alley by a spinner cop, they have a friendly argument and the cop leaves with the words "Have a better one!". It is supposed

[a better / the better/ the best \[Comparative adjectives\]](#)

"The better" is a superlative that only applies when comparing two people or things. "The best" is not wrong when comparing just two, but "the better" makes clear that the comparison is
